"...fundamentally, whether you're driving a great big Hummer SUV or some Al Gore-approved green SUV that weighs 5,000 lb, they're both an obscene waste of energy no matter if the energy comes from a coal-fired electric plant or a wind farm. Light and nimble is a wonderful thing...all the things that people know in Europe, just seem to be unconsidered over here. You know motorcycles must be very big and loud and chromed, and must bark and smoke, and you only ride them on Sundays -- dear God, that's not what a motorcycle is! A motorcycle is a wonderful way to go somewhere, to enjoy doing so, without wasting a whole lot of energy." —Eric Buell, interview, Motorcycle Sport and Leisure, January 2011 <mslmagazine.co.uk>
