8 PAIRS OF GLOVES

for the Road

1 Depending on your climate, warm weather may be drawing to a close for the year. So if you're looking for a pair of gloves that are comfortable in a variety of riding temperatures (except truly cold!), look no farther. Aerostich bills their Hot Weather Vegan gloves as a summer glove "ideal for all warm to hot weather rides." They're right, except we've found them nice even on 50-degree mornings. Unlike some other heavily-vented gloves, these feel like you're wearing something that won't grind away immediately if you were to hit the pavement. They're short, without a gauntlet, but still feature a hook-and-loop closure at the wrist. There are double layers of material in the slide areas, along with a lightweight knuckle protection built in on top. No bling, lots of comfort. Order a size larger than you normally wear, as they fit tight. We ordered a large instead of a medium, and they fit well, but snug. Price: $47. More info: www.aerostich.com

2 Definitely a summer-only glove, Tourmaster's Intake Air Gloves move more air than almost anything out there. The backhand is made with abrasion-resistant Armor-Link mesh set off with perforated goatskin. They also feature Carbolex-covered EVA foam knuckle padding and wrist armor, and the palm is made of perforated goatskin with a light EVA foam padding to reduce shock and vibration. They feature a medium-length (but not a full gauntlet) cuff with a hook-and-loop wrist closure. Thin and light, they are very comfortable and cool, even on 95 degree-plus days. While they may lack the protection of some of the heavier gloves here, summer gear is often a trade-off of safety versus comfort. Available in red, black, blue, silver and white. Price: $39.99. More info: www.tourmaster.com

3 Fulmer used to just make helmets, but now they make a full range of motorcycle gear from gloves to jackets and pants and more. We've been wearing a pair of their Deerskin Summer Weight Gloves (G11). They feature a one-piece deerskin leather palm with a cool, breathable and stretchy material on the top of the hand. Easy to put on and pull off, they feature a hook-and-loop closure at the cuff and deerskin reinforcements at the finger tips and knuckles. Minimalist and lightweight, they are comfortable and won't get in your way, but they are a little thin for our preference. Price: $25.95. More info: www.fulmerhelmets.com

4 These Sparta Gloves from British Motorcycle Gear are another lightweight, warm-weather glove. They feature 0.8mm cowhide skin in the palm with a durable, abrasion-resistant nylon fabric at the back of the hand. Breathable, comfortable and stretchy, they feature a double-layer of leather across the impact areas of the palm, along with gel-type padding across the knuckles. Flexible, lightweight but well-made, we're betting we get a lot of miles out of these. Price: $59. More info: www.britishmotorcyclegear.com
